SPEAKER LAST WEEK

UNITED MINDS
COMMUNITY SERVICES

United Minds is a community based psychology and social support service located in the Northern Suburbs, notably Yarrambat and Diamond Creek. Its large team of psychologists is spread widely throughout northern suburbs. The Food Bank is located at Yarrambat.

UMCS is a Not-For-Profit charity founded by Melissa Duckmanton in 2013 as a community based bulk-billing psychology service. The purpose of the service was to bridge the gap in access to mental health support by removing the financial burden of psychological support. Community Services Programme (C.S.P.) is the charity division that provides support to the community through community funded sessions in the psychology clinic, a foodbank, material aid and referrals to local community services and support schemes.

Speaker BREE BAXTER is a registered Counsellor with the Australian Counselling Association and a Gottman Bringing Baby Home educator. Tracey Russell, manager of the C.S.P., accompanied Bree on the night.

Bree's presentation covered numerous issues in the mental health field thus delivering a clear picture of urgency, strategic approaches and community involvement. The latter showed the action of the club's Community Committee of making a night of it and stressing the need for the club to both grow in cooperation with groups as United Minds and to seek out actions the club can take in this ever-growing field.

Bree's principal attention with UMCS is with couples about to have a baby or who are in post-natal condition. At times some of these parents need help in managing new communication skills or deal with post-natal stresses. The overall field of mental health aid has increased greatly causing greater burdens for UMCS and CSP. Fortunately, government aid has kicked in but the needs for support are still heavy. Calls for help by those suffering helplessness despair and anxiety is stressing for staff forced to put callers on an unprecedented waiting list. Currently the wait is approximately 3 weeks.

Face-to-face meetings are limited and Bree spent time explaining the benefits accruing from the use of telehealth sessions. Online meetings can be seen as an intrusion into one's personal and private space. However, it can also have certain benefits such as giving the psychologist the chance of experiencing the client's domestic status, relationships with household members and physical and personal living conditions. At times these aspects can be limited in face-face sessions.

Towards the end of her talk, after enlarging on the effects of lockdown and Covid, Bree listed positive effects these times have brought both to herself and her clients: "... a call to mindfulness practices, encouraging an awareness of the present moment, embracing a search for what we really value in our lives resilience, which is developed through adversity
